Biographical Sketch

William H. Moody was a prominent Republican lawyer and politician, who served as a United States Representative, Secretary for the Navy, Attorney General, and Supreme Court Justice. He was born on 23 December 1853, in Newbury, Massachusetts. He attended Phillips Academy in Andover, Massachusetts, graduating in 1872. He completed his secondary education at Harvard College from 1872-1876. He later attended Harvard Law, but dropped out after four months. He practiced reading the law under Richard Henry Dana Jr. and passed the Massachusetts bar. In 1888, he was elected as City Solicitor for Haverhill, Massachusetts. He was later appointed as U.S. Attorney for Eastern Massachusetts in 1890. In 1893, he was chosen to be a junior prosecutor in the Lizzie Borden murder trial. Afterwards, in 1895, he was elected as a federal Representative of Massachusetts in a special election to fill the seat of William Cogswell, who had died in office. In 1902, President Roosevelt appointed him as Secretary of the Navy. He was later appointed to U.S. Attorney General, serving from 1904-1906. Afterwards he was nominated, then confirmed, as an Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, serving from 1906-1910. Justice Moody retired from the bench in 1910, due to severe rheumatism. He was granted full retirement benefits by result of President William Taft successfully lobbying

Congress for a Special Act. In his retirement, he resided in Haverhill, actively involving himself in both politics and town affairs. Justice Moody died in Haverhill on 2 July 1917.

Scope and Content Note

This collection documents the life and political career of William H. Moody through various correspondence, newspaper clippings, and other assorted material. A majority of the newspaper clippings are from the Haverhill Gazette, but also include various local and national newspapers. The clippings document Moody's political and social life, offering biographical information and the impact after his death. Also included is correspondence between Moody and various government officials. Among the more prominent letters are those from the Roosevelt family, of both a political and friendly natures. Correspondence that occurs after his death are mainly to and from the Haverhill Historical Society in their attempts to acquire and preserve Moody's possessions. The collection contains a majority of the Lizzie Borden Trial Transcripts. Other formats in the collection include: photographs, invitations, financial records, speeches, an inventory, and a fabric wallet.
